Look Around

How time flies! Since Olaf helped Anna and Elsa end the eternal winter he's been living in Arendelle with them. Day by day he has been exploring his new home, where there's so much to see...such as the leaves swirling in the breeze he meets today. Have fun with him by coloring the blank ones!

NICE DISCOVERIES

There are so many interesting sights for Olaf to see along the streets of Arendelle. Use your pencils to draw and color copies of the things he sees around.

A SWEET SOUND

Complete the sequence of musical notes that represents Olaf's happy tune.

Snow and Tell

Since he became one of Arendelle's newest residents, Olaf has loved exploring his beautiful new home. "Oooh! A parade! I love parades," he exclaims, as he spots a group of children happily walking in a line, heading for school. He's so excited that he can't help but follow them. "Wait for me!" he calls out, waving his arms.

"Hi, Olaf," a girl named Lisbet says. "What are you doing today?" "Just wondering around town," Olaf replies. "You mean wandering?" she asks. "No, wondering...I'm wondering why you're parading inside when it's so nice out." "It's not a parade," Lisbet explains with a giggle. "It's school." Then she follows her classmates into the building.

Olaf is so curious. He peers through the window and sees Lisbet showing her seashell collection. "My shells are special because my dad is a fisherman. He always brings shells back from his trips," she says.

Just then, the teacher, Ms. Halvorson, spots Olaf at the window and welcomes him inside. "Would you care to join us?" she asks. "Really? Could I?" Olaf giggles. "What are you doing?" "We're having show-and-tell," the teacher explains.

"Ooooh," Olaf gasps. "I love show-and-tell! What is it?" "The students are sharing their collections," Ms. Halvorson replies. "These are items that have special meaning for us," Lisbet replies, showing her shells again.

Next it's Finn's turn. He pours smooth, shiny marbles into his hands for the class to see. Olaf frowns. "I have never seen such tiny not-white snowballs!" "These are glass marbles. I won each of them in a different game!" Finn explains.

Olaf is really impressed and looks forward to seeing other things. "Let's continue!" the teacher says. The kids patiently wait for their turn to show what they've brought from home. "Collections can be made up of all sorts of things," Ms. Halvorson says and adds, "from crystals to figurines, and even to fish!"

The snowman raises his hand. "Can I share my collection?" he asks. "I think you mean, May I share my collection," corrects the teacher. "Of course!" Olaf says.

Ms. Halvorson smiles. "Go ahead, Olaf." So he walks to the front of the class, and can't wait to tell what's special for him. "Hi, everyone!" he says. "Hi, Olaf!" the students respond.

"Yes, my name's Olaf," the snowman giggles. "And I like warm hugs. I collect them from everyone I meet!" "Erm..." Ms. Halvorson interrupts him. "Collections are usually made of things you can touch and store," Olaf smiles and his eyes light up. "Of course, they are! Then I will show you my collection!" he announces.

"Now I know what to do," Olaf says. First, he pulls off his carrot nose. "Here it is!" he giggles. Then, he reaches up and takes a handful of snow from his flurry. Next, from his side he pulls out an icicle with the tip broken off. "Here's my collection!" he exclaims, placing each item on Ms. Halvorson's desk happily.

But the teacher looks puzzled. “Olaf,” she says, “I don’t think you understand. Items in a collection have value or meaning. They’re unique and special in some way,” she adds.

“Gotcha!” Olaf says. Then Ms. Halvorson looks again at the items on her desk. “We usually collect things that aren’t just parts of our bodies.”

The tale of Olaf’s beautiful memories makes everything clear and Ms. Halvorson begins to understand. “And what about your icicle?” Lisbet asks. Olaf immediately holds it to his eye. “I used it to watch for my friends Kristoff and Sven when they returned to the castle to save Anna,” he explains. “It reminds me what true love looks like!”

“But my carrot nose is not just a part of my body!” Olaf explains. “It’s the first gift I ever received and reminds me of the day I met my friends Anna and Sven. When Anna gave it to me, Sven kept trying to kiss it. He was so cute!”

“And...what’s special about snow?” one curious kid asks. “My friend Elsa gave me my personal flurry, so I can live with her and Anna forever, even when winter ends,” Olaf recalls. “Now, wherever I go, I think of her special friendship.”

When Olaf finishes sharing, he looks at Ms. Halvorson. “Your eye’s melting,” he says. The teacher smiles and wipes away a small tear. Then, the entire class cheers as they come up to hug the little snowman. “We love you, Olaf!” they say. “Ohhh, my collection of hugs has just grown a lot!” he exclaims, looking thrilled.

Tales of Memories

Olaf is thrilled to be listening to the village children's stories about their memories. To see what they are about, complete the activities in their balloons!

Shiny Marbles

The kids love playing marbles with Olaf. Join the colorful fun! What colors do the combinations below make? Check the guide and fill in the blank sections.

Olaf's had a ball showing Ms. Halverson his personal collection. Match up the pairs and the things left over belong to his memories' tale.

A Story to Tell

SOFT AND SNOWY

Elsa gives Olaf a special cloud that lets him go around whatever weather. Complete the grid by connecting the missing clouds: One cloud for each row and column. Beware: There are two clouds extra!

FOND MEMORIES

Take a trip down memory lane with Olaf. Find the only path that leads to him: It contains the moments he's telling the teacher about!

VIOLET AND VITA

Cut out the cards and the decoration for your memory folder!

Shopping Time

Olaf and Sven are hurrying on their way to buy the things they need for the party. But not all the paths lead to the right destinations: Wind your way through the maze to find the three that do!

EXQUISITE TASTE

Family Matters

As he's walking through the castle, Olaf hears Elsa and Anna talking. "The ballroom is too big. How about the courtyard?" asks Anna. "The courtyard doesn't seem right either," Elsa replies. Olaf realizes the voices are coming from the study. "What are you doing?" he asks, entering the room. "We're planning a party," Elsa explains.

At that moment, Gerda and Kai walk in. "I've got some new flowers for you," Gerda says happily. "And I have your hot chocolate," Kai chimes in.

Anna quickly pulls Olaf aside. "It's a surprise party, so you have to keep it a secret," she whispers. "Ohh! I love secrets," says Olaf as Gerda and Kai leave the room.

Then Elsa has an idea. "Olaf, would you like to help us with the supplies for the party?" The little snowman's eyes light up. Elsa hands him a list. "Ooooh!" says Olaf.

"These must be secret ingredients! You can count on me." And before the sisters can read the list to him, Olaf races outside, eager to help.

As he's leaving, Olaf bumps into Kristoff and Sven. "I'm helping with the party," he says. Kristoff grins. "You mean the one for—" But Olaf shushes him. "It's a secret! My list is also a secret." "Really?" asks Kristoff. "Yes...so secret that even I don't know what it says." Kristoff laughs. "That's because you can't read. Let me help." And so he reads the list to Olaf and Sven.

In no time the snowman and his reindeer friend are off to find the supplies! “The first item on the list is goat cheese,” Olaf tells Sven. They head off toward the Anderson family goat farm. Once there, the two farmers, Marte and Goren, welcome them warmly. “Hi Olaf, what can we do for you?” they ask.

The Andersons invite Olaf in their house. “Who are these cute little critters?” he asks as he looks around the busy household. “Which ones? Our kids, or...our kids?” Marte teases.

“Baby goats are called kids, too—did you know that?” Goren explains. “We’re all one big family.” “That sounds like a nice family!” Olaf exclaims, and Sven agrees.

Then Goren looks at Olaf’s list. “A party, eh? Our cheese wheels are a perfect party snack!” “What are cheese wheels?” Olaf asks. “It’s how we store cheese,” explains Goren.

“We tried rectangles, but it was a disaster.” “Okay, I’ll have some wheels then!” Olaf exclaims. The Anderson’s kids help load the cheese onto the wagon.

Next stop is the Miller family flour mill, where Olaf meets a girl named Nora. “Is your mill haunted?” he asks. Nora laughs. “That’s no ghost! That’s Uncle Lasse covered in flour!”

Olaf finally stops at Violet and Vita’s nursery for flowers. “This garden’s been in our family for generations,” the sisters say. “Ohh, you’re a family too!” Olaf exclaims.

“I have goat cheese, flour, and buckets of flowers,” Olaf announces when he gets back to the castle. “Great work, Olaf!” Anna says. Then she starts tearing all the flowers into small pieces. How strange!

“I can’t wait to see the big cake!” Olaf says, hinting at the flour. “Oh, we’re not baking a cake,” Elsa replies, whisking away a plate full of cheese wheels. “See you at the party, and don’t forget that it’s in the library!”

“You’ve been family to us ever since I can remember,” Elsa says. “We wanted to say thank you,” Kai looks into his cup of frozen chocolate. “I can tell you made it!” he tells Elsa.

“We used salt, vinegar and Olaf’s flour to polish all the copper,” says Kristoff. Olaf turns to Anna, “And you made flowers into colorful snow!” “It’s called confetti!” she says.

But when Olaf arrives at the library, he sees only Elsa, Anna, Sven and Kristoff. “Where’s everyone else?” he asks puzzled. “This party is for our family,” Elsa explains. “And the guests of honor are about to arrive.” Then, Gerda and Kai enter, and Anna and Elsa throw the colorful flower petals into the air. “Surprise!” They are the guests of honor!

“Hmm,” says Olaf, looking puzzled. “So, what is the cheese for?” “To eat, of course,” answers Kai as he takes a big bite. “It’s my favorite food!” he adds. “This is a different kind of party,” says Olaf. Anna chuckles. “Well, I think we are a different kind of family.” “Yeah, different,” Olaf agrees. “And special, just like everyone else!”

The Anderson household is bustling with activity, and it's all taking place in a single room! To find out what our friends are up to, spot the blurry details in this scene and check them off.
